Seeing that virtually anyone (if ambulatory and sighted) can ride a bike--even aliens--will inspire your child to hop on, feel the wind in the face, and become a smiling bike rider! Includes a How-To Guide to help you coach and teach your child! If your child wants to learn to ride a bike, these tips will help them get past training wheels. Your child will: Overcome their fear of riding Feel confident in learning to ride Learn to ride independently Professor Klein has been instrumental in developing a national program for teaching children with disabilities to master bike riding, and has applied his techniques to this step-by-step guide. This program has helped tens of thousands of children, making it the largest and most successful program of its kind. Professor Klein's bike riding tips can help your child too! Interview with the Author Some people call you The Bike Whisperer. Would you say that's true? I consider that a great compliment. It's a joy to help and see children overcome their fear of riding. Understanding the child/bicycle connection is the key, just as understanding the horses was crucial in The Horse Whisperer. I help each child learn to listen to what the bike is telling them. My goal is to inspire confidence--I always tell the learning child that it's easy and they start to believe it. Will this book really help ANYONE learn to ride a bike? Bike riding isn't something we teach a person to do, but rather it's a discovered skill. Each child has the potential to discover how to ride a bike so long as the environment is conducive for that discovery. Through experimentation, children adapt to and master the bicycle and refine their balancing skills. What makes your techniques so different? There is little oral instruction. I provide an appropriate training bike (or modify their own bike if possible), a safe environment, correct spotting techniques, and then launch them to find their balance. For children with disabilities, I provide a series of trainer bikes with gradually more challenging characteristics until the children are able to master a conventional bike. How long have you been interested in bicycles? My academic background focused on understanding movement and control of movement. In 1983, during my tenure as a mechanical engineering professor at the University of Illinois, my research led to the study of how children learn to ride bicycles, how to design better learning bicycles, and then the innovation of a world-recognized adaptive bike program for children with varied disabilities. The program has now spread throughout much of North America. Where can I get more information about the adaptive bike program? In The Bike Whisperer: Changing the World One Bike Rider at a Time, I tell the story of my experiences in developing the program. You can also visit RainbowTrainers.com to get more information about our mission or icanshine.org/programs to learn about instructional camps.

Born to Ride May 30 2022 Louise Belinda Bellflower lives in Rochester, New York, in 1896. She spends her days playing with her brother, Joe. But Joe gets to ride a bicycle, and Louise Belinda doesn't. In fact, Joe issues a solemn warning: If girls ride bikes, their faces will get so scrunched up, eyes bulging from the effort of balancing, that they'll get stuck that way FOREVER! Louise Belinda is appalled by this nonsense, so she strikes out to discover the truth about this so-called "bicycle face." Set against the backdrop of the women's suffrage movement, Born to Ride is the story of one girl's courageous quest to prove that she can do everything the boys can do, while capturing the universal freedom and accomplishment children experience when riding a bike.

She learned to dive into a swimming pool, ride a bike, do a handstand, and surf. As she shared her experiences, she discovered that most people suffer from their own secret terrors—of flying, driving, heights, public speaking, and more. It became her mission to help others do what they thought they couldn't and to experience the joy and aliveness that is the true reward of becoming brave. Inspired and inspiring, this book draws on Anker's interviews with teachers, therapists, coaches, and clergy to convey both practical advice and profound wisdom. Pillow-Bike Number Race Workbook Jan 02 2020 A fun way to teach children how to write from one to ten. Bikes have been a staple to children, teenagers, and adults all around the world. As a child, you start out riding a small bike, then to a bigger bike, and finally maybe to a motorcycle. Your children and you will enjoy the pictures of the different colored pillows on the motorbikes. Let your child's imagination take over while having fun learning to write. Included in the dedication is the history of the first bike. The idea behind this little book is learning to write while also learning the history about the first bike. This was an awesome book and workbook to create. It brought back some of my childhood experiences. I remember as a kid learning how to ride my first bike, advancing to a bigger bike, then to a motorized bike, and then finally to a big motorcycle. Not everyone has the desire to ride a motorcycle, but I found working on them and riding them very soothing and relaxing. Developing a short story that teaches numbers while racing around a dirt track was very fun. I wrote and illustrated the fun into the book, so kids can see and feel the fun like I did. The handmade illustrations are colorful and fun to look at. Your child's imagination will take over and the fun of learning will start. The concept in the way this book is written was to make it interactive so you could also have some fun with your child while you are helping them learn to write, count and read. Book Details Book Cover The book cover brings the character "Pillow" and the bike into view. It gives you a preview of what the illustrations will look like that will be in the book. The Pillow, as the character, is relatable because it is an item that we all use each day. It brings humor and imagination into the book. A Pillow riding a bike, ha-ha!! Dedication This dedication goes out to everyone that helps to reduce climate change. Did you know that a volcano (Mount Tambora) in 1815 on the island of Sumbawa in Indonesia was the largest recorded eruption in recorded history. The result from this eruption was the invention of the first bicycle called laufmaschine ("running machine"). The laufmaschine also referred to as the dandy horse, was invented by Baron Karl von Drais, a German inventor. This was invented due to the climate change that resulted from the volcano eruption. Horses were used less due to lack of resources to feed them, which drove the need for other means of transporting things to be invented. To this day, we invent machinery to help reduce climate change, or to help us with climate change. Character The Pillow being the character riding the bike, is like the pillow your child is familiar with at bedtime or relaxing with on the couch. The different color Pillows racing around this dirt track is fun to look at while switching pages through the book. Each Pillow has its own way of advancing their number on the dirt track while trying to win the race. Writing The writing voice in the eBook is that of a sports commentator. As your children and you read this book, you both will sound like you are a sports commentator. In this book, you will see each number, the sequence of the numbers and the numbers spelled out. I love using funny phrases to make your children and you chuckle at the same time as you are helping them learn. My goal is to make learning fun.

who became a legend in his time and remains an enigma to this day. Riding to Washington Jun 06 2020 Janie is not exactly sure why her daddy is riding a bus from Indianapolis to Washington, D.C. She knows why she has to go-to stay out of her mother's way, especially with the twins now teething. But Daddy wants to hear a man named Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. speak and, to keep out of trouble, Janie is sent along. She begins to realize that she's not so different from the other riders and that, as young as she is, her actions can affect change. JAY MILLER grew up in Billy the Kid Country, listening to yarns about Billy, some true, some not. As a syndicated newspaper columnist, Miller has written often about Billy and the Lincoln County War and has used a collection of those columns to weave a riveting story of just what happened when Billy rode again.
